The member of Hong Kong Aviation Club (HKCA), Mr. Raymond MOK successfully organized an interesting event for our members to get an overview on the aviation management, i.e. flying project plan, as well as touring the hangar.

Hong Kong Institute of Project Management invited 4 experienced licensed pilots to share the principles of making flying project plan and their indelible experience and fun with the participants.

The participants enjoyed the presentation and felt excited on the topics concerning the air traffic law and the real picture about the hectic traffic condition in the sky.

Besides obtaining the information close to the daily life, the participants also got brief technical concepts on the layout and function of the aircraft cockpit and the radio communication.

Such meaningful and enlightening event not only provided a chance for HKIPM members to understand how the project management concept applies to aviation activity but also created a platform for the public to have a close contact with such a hi-tech industry and hence impulsing the development of aviation industry in Hong Kong.
